

Activity 11-4: Your recovery journey

What elements might be particularly important for your own journey of recovery as the family member of a person with concurrent disorders? Try to be as specific as possible. (For example, maybe you would understand and accept your family member's illnesses, be able to let go of guilt and move forward with your own life goals and dreams, reconnect with friends and return to enjoyable leisurely activities.)