

Is something not quite right?

The PREDICT study is looking at improving the ability to identify individuals who may be at risk of developing a psychotic illness. Individuals will be seen monthly for 1-1/2 hours each time, over a 3 to 5 year period. Every six months there will be a full day of testing.

You may be eligible for this study if you are 12 to 30 years old and are experiencing some of the following:

- Experiencing discomfort out in public
- Spending more time alone
- Dropping out of activities
- Beginning to slip behind at work or school
- Having difficulty concentrating or thinking clearly
- Feeling suspicious of other people
- Feeling that the world has become strange and unreal
- Having more mystical/philosophical or religious ideas
- Developing poor eating habits, sleeping patterns, personal hygiene
- Having blank expressions, not responding to questions or frequently asking for questions to be repeated
- Feeling more easily overwhelmed and more sensitive to stress

People who have a family member who has a mental illness, and who are now experiencing their own difficulty in functioning, are also encouraged to contact us.

The PREDICT study offers assessment, support, and compensation to eligible individuals. If you would like to speak to someone regarding this study, please call the PRIME Clinic at:
